Synergis Publishes SynergisCAD Blog

Autodesk Platinum Tier Partner Authors New Blog for Better Customer Support

QUAKERTOWN, Pennsylvania, October 18, 2012— Synergis Technologies, Inc. today announced the launch of the Synergis Engineering Design Solutions blog as the hub for discussions, industry news, software information, and technical expertise. The SynergisCAD Blog (<http://synergiscadblog.com>) is a source for information for Autodesk software users to hear from certified Autodesk professionals and trainers about the Autodesk solutions, in real-world applications, helping these design engineers innovate their designs and processes.

Synergis, an Autodesk Platinum Tier Partner providing customers with best-in-class full solutions support, consulting, training, implementation, customization, is now lending technical and industry knowledge through this new outlet. Synergis' aim is to help customers make more informed decisions on their business and offer tips to keep them ahead of the competition.

“The SynergisCAD Blog complements Synergis' online presence and provides engineers access to the expertise of our professional services team,” said Kristen Tomasic, vice president of Synergis Engineering Design Solutions. “Our team comes from industry, manufacturing, AEC, engineering, natural resources and infrastructure (ENI), and understands what is important to our customers. The blog enables them to share their perspectives on industry solutions and trends and provides a forum for interactive discussion with the entire design community.”
